

English III: American Literature

Name: _____

Nobody Knows—

Sometimes generating multiple drafts of an idea is essential for creating a strong functional project.

Purpose: experiment with established conventions and restrictions in order to communicate a unique idea detailing something about your personality or past history.

1. On the back of the supplied notepaper, list basic ideas for five minutes outlining potential items which describe an aspect of your character. These items should be considered more-or-less not known by others, your friends, or even family.
2. Follow the basic instructions already established regarding freewrite sessions.
3. At the close of the allotted time span, your end goal is to have five diverse statements about yourself which could be posted on Twitter with the hashtag “#nobody knows.”

Some Examples: _____

.@Prufrocksblues #Nobodyknows that I wrestle alligators on weekends.

.@Prufrocksblues #Nobodyknows that my father ran for political office in Houston back in 2009.

.@Prufrocksblues #Nobodyknows that I can't stand the taste of chocolate ice cream.

Objectives: _____

1. Be conscious of the 140 character rule limit. Provide something unusual, unexpected, and/or creative.
2. Select the most appropriate statement for public viewing.
3. Post your selected tweet to: .@Prufrocksblues.

Remember to put a period in front of the Tweet address, allowing for multiple viewers.